TO CHANGE PLAY.

Howe Will Give Happy Ending to "Story of a Country Town."

Now Making "Big Adam" Hero in the Last Act.

LETTER A FORGERY.

Comedy Character as Exposer of Clinton Bragg's Treachery.

Author Says He Is Enthusiastic Over the New Idea.

The Story of a Country Town," the Ed W. Howe drams, adapted from the book of the same name, which Mr. Howe wrote twenty-eight years ago, is to be changed, it became known to-day, so that the drama will have a happy ending and so that Big Adam, the principal comedy character, will be the hero of the play.

Regarding the above.

Regarding the changes that he will make, Mr. Howe writes:
"I intend to change the third act. introducing Big Adam, and making him the hero. The idea was suggested faintly, in a letter written by a Topeka banker. I have forgotten his name, banker. I have forgotten his name, but I recall that he was president of the bank.

As the re-written play will be seen. jealous. Big Adam goes well with the audience and this change will greatly improve the character. The ending will be pleasant and the change will help the play in many ways. The first and second acts will be changed very little. I am very enthusiastic over the new idea and it comes into shape easily."

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Like "Fourth Estate" at First, Perhaps, the greatest criticism that has been made against the drama of Mr. Howe has been the morbid ending of the play as originally written. It was a similar something that made "The Fourth Estate," the great American newspaper play by Joseph Medill Patterson, a fallure when originally produced at Wallack's theater, New York.

In "The Fourth Estate" as originally written, Wheeler Brand, the principal male character managing editor of the Advance, shoots himself after of the Advance, shoots himself after having sent to press against orders, the paper containing a sensational expose of a federal judge. He has done this purely through his sense of honor as seen to be due to the constituents of the paper and at a time when he might have desisted and won the hand of the daughter of Judge Bartalmy the girl he loved and to whom telmy, the girl he loved and to whom he was engaged up to the time when the crusade against Bartelmy was darted by the paper. The owner of the Advance, after having started a fight against corruption, through the social ambitions of his family was prevailed upon to desist. Later he promised Brand that if given proof of Bartelmy's cor-ruptness he would continue the crusade. Brand obtained pictures of Bartelmy in the act of paying him a bribe, also through a trick in the use of a telephone was enabled to have a stenographer take down the cords of their conversation. It was this thing, in newspaper purlance re-ferred to as a "story" that the owner of the Advance had refused to print, even after his word had been given. by Mr. Ray and two daughters. [Items for the East Topeka cojumn may be telephoned to Ind. phone 1781.]

Patterson Made Play Success, Following the failure of "The Fourth Estate," which was attributed to the fact that few outside the newspaper field could appreciate the feel-ing that caused Wheeler Brand to kill himself, the play was re-written so that Bartelmy entered the mechanical department of the Advance within a few minutes of press time. There he few minutes of press time. There he evening service.

The house was not only sold out, but the standing room was occupied, and people were turned away. Of course the play will no do, in its present form, as pointed out by the critics, but it seems that the people of the town where it received its first presentation have taken some interest in it.

"J. E. House, the grouch of the Cap-ital, attended the play again last night and went behind the curtain to see the actors. He had never been in the Ma-jestic theater until the Atchison play was presented there. And what is more, he is coming to Atchison to see the play here Sunday night. L. L. Kiene, managing editor of the Topeka Journal, is also coming over, with his Journal, is also coming over, with his daughter Marguerite. The North Bros, say no play presented by them in two years has received the appreciation the Atchison play has received. And in the past two years they have presented one hundred and four different plays."

After the play had been re-written it was a success and now it not only is considered the greatest newspaper drama on the American stage, but it has been a success in every way.

When "The Story of a Country Town," was first produced last Monday night, there were many who critical citized it on a similar score to that to which is attributed the failure of the originality written "The Fourth Estate."

and Agnes got much more out of their scene in the second act than on Southern Pacific and Union Pacific and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe roads agreed to the plan of giving the ad-vantage of low fares only to members of the association. Officials of many other western railroads, however, have been opposed to this plan and when the subject was brought before the Transcontinental Passenger association a stormy debate ensued. It finally was agreed that the N. F. A. compact in regard to San Francisco should be observed, but that a similar rate to Los Angeles without any N. E. A. attachment also should be offered. Tickets will be sold between June 27 and July 5.

It also was decided at the Transcontinental Passenger association meeting to establish summer tourist rates to the Pacific coast at $72.50 for the round trip. There will be no reduction from this amount on account of the conventions of the American Sunday School association and the Eagles in San Francisco and the annual meeting of the American Medical association in Los Angeles.
